

for the Parowan stake, Brother Frank Westbrook maintaining a position in the Piano orchestra, and the two were naturally prominent socially. Sister Phebe died March 17th of pneumonia after an illness of six days, leaving four little girls motherless. As a token of the acceptance of her labors and the high regard in which she was held the officers of the R. R. requested the privilege of robing Sister Westbrook for her final rest. This act of sisterly love will never be forgotten by the aged mother, brothers and sisters of the departed while "life and thought and being last." When dying Sister Phebe asked "that her body be taken home to mother." The intervening days between the receipt of the sad news and the arrival of the corpse was an agonizing period for that enfeebled parent of more than three score and ten, but when her eyes beheld her darling so beautifully dressed in her silken robes of purest white, so tastily and tenderly (adjusted by those who were strangers, yet so worthy and motherly) reposing as if in sleep in a rich and costly casket of the same spotless hue, so typical of the Paradise to which the spirit had flown, death's terrors were somewhat softened, and the mother said, "my Phebe has gone to the best home she ever knew." Sister Westbrook was thirty years of age. Her husband will make his lonely return trip in a few days, bearing with him the prayers and blessings of the bereaved relatives to the Piano ward, who by their extreme kindness have made for themselves a name that will be held sacred in the memories of the living relatives of Sister Phebe Westbrook.

We are pleased to have Niels Madson at home again. He has been working on the Bell Telephone line the past month.

Our town people have been afflicted with Lagrippe the last week or ten days. There is scarcely a home but what it has visited, and some families have all been down at once.

The Wagon Missionaries made us a visit last Monday. After canvassing the town and leaving their tracts they held a meeting in the evening. They had a full house and a very attentive audience, but the people went home without being fed with the true bread of life.

Last Friday, March 11th, the Relief Society held its Annual Day celebration. The program consisted of songs, recitations and dancing. At 10:30 p.m. ice cream and cake was served. Among the visitors was Mr. John Roundy and mother, who were on their way home from Cedar City with the Misses Maude and Sophia Roundy, who have passed through such a siege of typhoid fever. We sincerely hope they will reach their home in safety.

By this time the Bell Telephone Co. has its line through Bellevue. It is reported that they intend running a spur over to Toquerville before building to Leeds and on to St. George.
